See all 15 photosTHE LATEST IN CAR NEWSShare on FacebookShare on Twitter CC0/Scozzy/Pixabay The Jeep Wrangler is a car that bills itself on its fearless character. Its ability to drive through bush, rocky terrain, ice, and other unsavory weather conditions makes it a phenomenal car. With that in mind, we decided to install a free-flowing exhaust system, a throttle-body spacer, fresh plugs and wires, and a cold-air intake system to really awaken it to its true potential. For our '99 Jeep Grand Cherokee, it came at 137,000-plus miles when power began waning, even while using synthetic oil for regular oil changes and an open-element air filter in place of the factory air filter. It comes with 17 inch by 7.5 inch wheels that are styled in black steel. With all in place, we felt the improvements immediately. If you are purchasing used, there are even more buying options, from scouting owners in your area looking to sell, to checking sites like Craigslist. The Sahara has 18 inch polished aluminum wheels, a 2.0L direct injection turbo engine for improved city commute gas efficiency, and Selec-Trac four by four system. Optional upgrades will cost extra.Wrangler Sport - Budget-Friendly WranglerWhile Wrangler models are not cheap, for those looking to save some money, the Wrangler Sport is the best option. The original Jeep was a military utility vehicle used by the US Army to move manpower reliably in the war theater.The Jeep was such a successful and reliable vehicle that, after the war, demand for its four wheel drive technology soared among civilian buyers. This has proven to be more than marketing talk, for the Wrangler has proven a reliable off road winner. The Rubicon starts at between $38,000 and $40,000. Check out the photos and captions to see how it's done. There are several good reasons to buy used. Its Sky-One Power Top is retractable. Not only does it fit more people than other Wrangler variants, but it departs from typical Wrangler design by adding more creature comforts.
